The Orientation-Balanced Agenda

A meeting agenda template with a segment that serves each orientation, in a deliberate order. No orientation spends the whole meeting drained, and each contributes from its energy.

THE DRAIN

Most meetings are built in one orientation's image: all-vision meetings that never land, all-status meetings that never mean anything, all-detail meetings that never move. Whoever is wired differently spends the hour depleted, and the meeting loses exactly the contribution it needed from them.

WHAT THIS TOOL DOES

The template sequences the meeting through all three energies on purpose: a purpose frame that orients, a decision-and-action core that moves, a scheduled precision pass that catches what speed missed, and a close that converts it all into commitments. Everyone works from their primary at least once per meeting.

HOW TO USE IT

- 1 Publish the blocks in the invite. When HOW-primaries know their pass is coming, they stop fighting for airtime early.
- 2 Hold the frame to five minutes. Purpose orients; it does not need to philosophize. The timer protects the WHATs.
- 3 Protect the precision pass fiercely. It is the first block cut when time runs short, and cutting it is how meetings ship broken decisions.
- 4 Rotate who opens each block. Ideally by primary orientation. The Keeper Cards make this a system.

The agenda blocks

- | | |
|--------------------------------|---|
| 1 Purpose frame | Five minutes: why this meeting, what decision it serves. The WHY energy opens. |
| 2 Decisions and actions | The core: options, calls, owners. The WHAT energy drives. |
| 3 Precision pass | Ten scheduled minutes: edge cases, dependencies, what breaks. The HOW energy, invited rather than interrupting. |
| 4 The close | Closing Card: one action, one owner, one date, written in the room. |

WHAT IT WON'T DO

A balanced agenda cannot rescue a meeting with no purpose, and not every gathering needs all four blocks, a pure working session can skip the frame. The template is for decision meetings, where all three energies genuinely have work to do.
